

EFFECTIVE TIME MANAGEMENT, AND WORK ETHICS

COURSE OVERVIEW

The planning and organization of tasks is the activity of bridging the gap from where you are now to where you want to be.

This course will concentrate on the four principles of the planning function:

How are we going to achieve the task?

Who does what?

When does it have to be done? (Priority)

To what standard?

Being able to set priorities and allocate time appropriately are critical skills for achieving goals. If processes are organized, the planning, directing and controlling techniques will fail and consequently time, quality and performance suffer.

COURSE OBJECTIVES

By the end of this course delegates will have a detailed understanding of the skills required to plan, schedule and manage priorities more effectively to meet their deadlines.

Upon completion of this program delegates will be able to:

- Identify the stages involved in strategic planning, scheduling and controlling work, and apply them to their own environment.
- Define the importance of planning and scheduling in relation the functions of management.
- Plan strategic daily tasks and goals and prioritise them.
- Control the resources available to them and their team.
- Recognize the importance of setting and checking against agreed standards.
- Monitor daily work habits and determine areas for improvement.
- Apply critical path methods for planning projects and work activities
- Organize and plan work processes in order to enhance personal and corporate performance.
- Set goals and priorities that enable them to effectively manage time.
